FINDING SPIRITUALITY in people outside the church ....

..... is a good definition of chaplaincy. Yes, chaplains are typically people who are paid to offer pastoral care in organisations such as prisons, hospitals, or schools, but many ministers find themselves offering informal ministry outside the local church, in a cafe, with a choir, on the streets, in a workplace, a residential home, or perhaps a shopping centre. The ability to connect with people in other settings and to identify God within them is at the heart of chaplaincy, and it's increasingly a part of ministry for many of us.

Do you do this? Does your ministry take you to surprising places? Do you find God far from the local church? Might you welcome sharing ideas with others who are also identifying spirituality 'in the wild'?

If so, I'd love to hear from you. I have been asked to support and promote chaplaincy in our area. I believe that means not only working with those who are paid as chaplains, but identifying and working with those who do chaplaincy-type work as part of local ministry. If this means you, please tell me about yourself.

EU REFERENDUM RESOURCE: Our new resource for the EU Referendum is available to download here. With non-partisan information, reflections and questions on a range of related issues, it aims to encourage individuals and churches to think through Britain's membership of the European Union in the light of the gospel command to love your neighbour. It is perfect for individual study or group discussion. We hope you find it helpful.
